High Efficiency Insert Brings the Heat Back into Your Home

DELTA, British Columbia (November 5, 2009) – As the winter season approaches, consumers begin considering replacing their old drafty masonry fireplace. The open combustion design of older masonry fireplaces results in efficiency ratings as low as 0 to 20% (www.woodheat.org). A traditional masonry fireplace consumes copious amounts of room air and fuel with little heat output, much of which is lost through the chimney. Most homeowners compensate for this heat loss by turning up their furnace, which results in higher home heating costs.

Regency Fireplace Products offers several solutions to convert your old fireplace into a high efficiency heater. A Regency fireplace insert is an insulated seamless system that assures that warm air is delivered to your home. Regency inserts are available in wide range of sizes that can easily fit in any masonry opening, along with fuel options of wood, gas or pellet. This allows buyers to select the most convenient and cost effective size and fuel for their home. Homeowners also enjoy piece of mind; all Regency heaters adhere to the strict regulations of the Environmental Protection Agency, producing close to zero air pollutants.

A Regency insert allows consumers to renovate with style. Offering hundreds of customizable looks from traditional to contemporary, consumers can easily select the ideal look to match their home décor. With high heat output and lower heating bills, a Regency insert is a must have upgrade for this winter season.
